3 Comparative Religion and Human Origins: Totemism and Evolution. Such beliefs included religion. Under this came polytheism, monotheism, and the concept of a high god; the after-life; theodicy; and divine agency. Opinions were divided as to whether there existed any peoples so 'primitive' as to recognize no god at all.

- 'Primitive religion' also shows that belief is very dynamic and changing. Belief is not a concrete specific 'thing' consisting of principles, definitions, and such, which is set in stone (as we're normally taught in organized religion). It is, rather, a condition, an attitude, a stance a person takes in life.
